NEWSPAPER MAN RAILROADS MAY BE SOLD APART IF AGUA PRIETA DESIRED NOW

Associated Press Correspondent Declares That No Speculators at Customs House Had Guns or Other Weapons.

Douglas, Ariz., April 20.—The decision of Minister de la Barra's response to President Taft's protest against the firing into Douglas by the Mexican federal troops and the rebels who received here today, the effect of creation of the New Mexico Central railroad to out of C. Murray from the ownership of the road was unascertained, but the Albuquerque Eastern, which is included in the New Mexico Central, was taken from the control of Roswell Murray, and the attorneys in the case will agree upon a receiver to take charge of this property.

This case had been hotly contested, and the arguments have taken up the time of the court for more than a week. Eight sessions have been held the last three days in order to expedite the conclusion of the case and to enable Judge McPhee to save Santa Fe in time to appear before the congressional committee in behalf of the bill to admit New Mexico to statehood.

The Associated Press correspondent, on the ground makes a statement showing that in the day battle the insurgents came near the American customs house, but that at no time did they take possession of the building or cross into American territory.

The American cavalry, which arrived immediately after the battle opened, took possession of all the ground on the American side near the customs house.

The Associated Press correspondent, who stood on the porch of the porch of the customs house with many other Americans and Mexicans, says there was not a single gun in the hands of any of the fighters.

DIES OF EXPOSURE ON LONE PRAIRIE

Cowboy is Thrown From His Horse, and Lies on Frozen Ground for Two Days Unconscious Before Found.

Baton, N. M., April 20.—The last act of a mournful tragedy was enacted when the body of Talbot Sargeant, a young man who was thrown from a horse upon his head sometime during Saturday evening and that he had lain out of the saddle all night and all next day until Sunday evening when he was accidentally discovered by someone going to the Smith cabin. The exposure to the freezing night air, combined with the shock from the wound on the skull, was such as to make all efforts of medical skill futile.

RIBONCO BILL

"Fourteen years behind the bars, however, is a long time," the Rio Grande Valley did not look familiar to me. I tramped ahead, however, but I was surprised how often I ran into settlements and houses. I reached Albuquerque Wednesday night and bought a paper. It said I had not been captured but was headed this way. I only knew two people here who would be likely to recognize me. One was Ben Williams of the Santa Fe; I was afraid of meeting up with Ben. I had $40 in cash and knew I could get through straight. I ate supper at a restaurant and after that I went to a rooming house on South First street and got a bed. I was worn out from the long walk.

I lay in bed for a long time wondering what I had best do.

He Abandons His Career.

"I admit the temptation was strong in me to go back to the old trade. I know none of the old boys were left, but I kept telling like I had ought to go out and buy me a couple of good guns and make a run for it. I used to do the same and until then plunged be in this shoulder, it hadn't made good. I thought it over for maybe an hour and then I said to myself, 'No, you're you've mixed up in the killing again long enough, no more guns for you. If you get away with it, they'll get the gun on you, it's bad for the punishment.'

I rolled over and went to sleep and it was late when I awoke up. I got a smoke to eat and I didn't part around any and I went my lame arm swinging as I could. I started down the main the Santa Fe yards and it was quite a surprise to see the size of them. Fourteen years ago there was only one track down there and it wasn't long. I walked right out and had no trouble stopping me. I tried to hold him out of it but couldn't. I saw the game was up and admitted who I was. Just for a minute I wished for a gun; I'm glad I didn't have it. I don't want to kill."

Did He Seek Cache?

The story of a robbery of a Santa Fe train near Belen nearly fifteen years ago is still fresh in the minds of the older officers. Brown was the leader of the gang of several men who secured a large sum of money estimated at from $10,000 to $40,000. The officers now are wondering whether or not the money might not have been cached here, the scene of that hold-up, and if Brown was not going in that direction with the intention of first getting the money and then proceeding towards Mexico. Brown says the money was spent and yet the question of state's rights will intervene to some extent in the consideration of this Arizona constitution. There are United States senators, Democrats and Republicans, who are steadfastly opposed to the initiative referendum and recall, which voted for the joint admission of Arizona and New Mexico to statehood in the closing hours of the last session of Congress. They maintain that both Arizona and New Mexico have complied with certain requirements of the enabling act passed by congress in 1910, and that both the Republican and the Democratic national platforms declare the party policy to be in favor of the admission of these two territories. The enabling act provides that the two territories may be admitted to statehood upon the condition that the constitutions are Republican in form and make no discrimination in civil or political rights on account of race or color, and shall not be repugnant to the constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence. These are senators, who also steadfastly defend the principle of state's rights and oppose federal taxation as to the management of political subdivisions, who hold most firmly that the initiative, the referendum and the recall is a method of government which is not "republican in form," therefore contrary to a specific requirement of the enabling act, that it is repugnant to the constitution of the United States in that the recall in the case of Arizona applies to the judiciary, and would disrupt the judicial system and destroy the integrity of the law, as provided for in the constitution. Hence there are some deep sub-themes to be discussed, and the signs portend a battle of intellectual giants.

When Brown Was Shot.

He was sent to prison for life for the killing of a deputy sheriff named Vigil in Valencia county. The officer, with a posse of several Indian trailers, pursued the robbers of the Belen train. They came up with them in Valencia and opened fire. The officer was killed, four of the Indian trailers were shot and one of the bandits "Kid" Johnson, was killed.

It seems hardly probable that he would go to Mexico with but $40 in his possession but Brown last night declared that he would have gotten more money from friends and he once reached a place where it was safe to communicate with them.

One Indian trader exposed but a few inches of his head while peering out from behind a rock but so deadly was the fire, that the top of his brain was blown off almost immediately.

"I didn't kill the officer," said Brown last night. "Johnson shot him. I was mixing up with them Indians at the time and was so busy I didn't know who was shot until it was all over. I got a Winchester bullet in my shoulder and a couple of em in the arm and side, so I wasn't much good and they took me before I could crawl down to where my mate was."

Red Pipkin, another member of the band, was later caught in Nevada, where he had been operating with a gang of outlaws. He is now in prison.

George Armijo, probate clerk of Santa Fe county was in the city last night and met Brown as Deputy sheriff Fred Heyn was taking him to jail in old Albuquerque. Mr. Armijo was captain of guards at the prison for a number of years and knew Brown well. They shook hands and Brown said:

"Well, George, I'm back again. I didn't use a gun this time." He wanted to know if Mr. Armijo was going to take him to Santa Fe but Armijo declined with thanks.

Chester Romero, superintendent of the territorial prison and Capt. Fred Forney of the New Mexico mounted police, arrived in Albuquerque today and will take Brown back tonight. He had been given a number of privileges at the prison, according to Capt. officials, because of his good conduct, but however, he will not have such an opportunity to escape.

"I won't try it again," said Brown. "There isn't any use running from an officer without a gun and I've quit using 'em."

The outlaw had possessed himself with a new five dollar hat, the kind worn by a cowboy years ago, a suit of well fitting clothes and a blue checked shirt.

He wore the same quizzical smile when locked up that has characterized him in even his most desperate ventures. Smiling and shooting are the only two things that Brown has reduced to a science. The smile is caused by a partial paralytic of the facial muscles from a bullet.

ANOTHER LIFE CONVICT WAS ALMOST KILLED

Sheriff Romero Says Broneo Let Go of Hope and His Companion Left to Ground Bodily Injured.

Supt. Cleef's Romero and Capt. Fred Forney arrived in the city today and will take Broneo Bill, officially known as William Miller back to prison tonight. He is the first man to escape from the prison since Mr. Romero took charge and he had less than five days freedom. Kinch Miller, also a life convict, was the man who aided Broneo in the escape and Superintendent Romero says he is now in the prison hospital at Santa Fe suffering from dangerous injuries.

"Broneo arranged with Miller to blow him down a rope," said Mr. Romero. "When it came Miller's time to be lowered, Broneo let go of the rope and Miller fell with a thud to the pavement outside the wall, so badly injured he could not move and was easily retaken. I believe that Broneo wanted to get rid of Miller even if he killed him."

"Broneo has been a trusty for five years and we had implicit confidence in him. He will find a different position awaiting him upon his return to the prison. He had all the priviledges ever given a trusted prisoner and he will lose all of them including his good record marks. Being a life convict, he had no good time allowance."
